Since its establishment in 1958 in order to finance infrastructure projects within the European Union member states, the European Investment Bank has continuously expanded its operations. Today the EIB has become not only the world’s largest public lender – with annual lending operations of almost 50 billion EUR – but also a major financier in developing countries. Lending outside the EU has increased significantly, especially in the last two decades, and has become an important part of EIB activities. In 2007 the EIB spent 6.3 billion EUR, or more than 13% of its overall portfolio, on projects outside the EU, which constitutes a major part of the lending under the Union’s external development and economic cooperation programmes.

Mandated activities are based on the cooperation frameworks established between the EU and cooperating non-member states. With regard to developing countries, these frameworks are embedded in the EU policies for development cooperation, which find practical application in the so-called Country Strategy Papers jointly prepared by the Commission.

Consistency and coherence between EIB operations and EU policies is essential to the fulfilment of EU external policy objectives. This requirement for coherence and the EU’s growing investments in the global south demand a closer look on what the EIB finances. The analysis of impacts of development lending is of crucial importance because financial resources must be directed to their best use in order to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and other general and global commitments, for example on climate change.

Aside from policy coherence and analysis of impacts regarding sustainable development, poverty alleviation and climate protection, possible improvements for future investments and alternatives to the business as usual approach will be discussed.
